Continental cool: the new brands to try

Euro-chic doesn't just boil down to Zara. These are the other must-buy European labels. By Anna Murphy

Whether or not you're a fan of the continent's fashion scene, it's hard to ignore the fact that Europe is still the most influential source of new styles. From the minimalist, utilitarian aesthetic of the Nordics to the maximalist, romanticism of the British Isles, the continent's fashion scene is a rich and varied one. And it's not just about the clothes themselves, but also about the way they are made and the way they are worn. In a world where fast fashion is king, European brands are still committed to quality and craftsmanship. They are also committed to sustainability and ethical sourcing. So if you're looking for clothes that are not only stylish but also responsible, European brands are a great choice. Here are some of the best ones to try.

These are clothes that are flattering, feminine and have sleeves and under the delicate black and white sequined blazer (from £20, from September's collection), all of the above comes with a matching skirt.

It's also a nice touch that the brand's new jumpsuits are made from a soft, stretchy fabric that is perfect for all-day wear.

The Trend Alexa Chung Says Is So Over

by ADRIANNA BARRIONUEVO

If the images from Coachella weekend are any indication, chokers are the hippest accessory of the season (particularly according to Taylor Swift on Instagram), but Alexa Chung thinks the trend has peaked. "Oh my god, the choker is so dead. No thank you," the new tech entrepreneur told Fashionista.

"No, it's fine," she clarified. "Look, everyone can do whatever they want, but I do think there is a certain thing with trends when they reach a tipping point, and that tipping point to me, with the choker, seems to have happened a few months ago. But they look cool, so [I] get it!"

Chung also skipped Coachella this year for the first time in a decade. "I just need something a little bit freer," the model said. If you want to take Alexa's advice, keep scrolling to shop non-choker necklaces.

FASHION CRUSH – KATERINA MAKRIYIANNI LAPIS LAZULI RING

I loved this Katerina Makriyianni ring at first sight! I love evil eye jewelry and I love lapis lazuli. The bright and intense blue of this stone is so beautiful, it reminds of the deep blue sea.

Lapis lazuli is a semi-precious stone and it's always been used, since the ancient times. Egyptians loved it and used it to make jewelry and talismans. People who believe in the healing properties of stones think lapis lazuli has many benefits and properties, like the capability of increasing creativity and easing headache and anxiety. I don't know if it's true, but it's a beautiful stone, that's enough!

Katerina Makriyianni is a Greek jewelry designer and she takes inspiration from the nature of her beautiful home country so I'm sure the beautiful sea of Greece is a source of inspiration for her. She grew up surrounded by art and creativity since her parents are jewelry designers, too, and she improved her skills in Florence.

While I usually don't like good-luck charms and symbols (every time somebody gifted me with them, they brought me bad luck) I've always had a thing for eye-shaped jewelry and eye prints so I love this sterling silver gold-plated ring.

I'd really like to add a lapis lazuli piece to my jewelry collection and this ring by Katerina Makriyianni seems to be a perfect choice.

THE EARRINGS KATERINA MAKRIYIANNI

Cretan-born jewelry designer Katerina Makriyianni got her start early. While still a young girl, her parents opened a jewelry boutique and workshop, which specialized in unique, bespoke designs. Her interest sufficiently piqued, Makriyianni went on to study ballet and theatre throughout her childhood before following the family legacy and taking specialized courses in design and engraving.

Years later, her eponymous label is making waves. Her collections are filled with a mix of ancient Greek-inspired bracelets and necklaces, rings made from hammered gold and colorful gemstones, and her now signature Kilims earrings (shown above). Already a fashion set favorite, they're the type of shoulder dusting statement makers that you want to wear whilst vacationing on a Greek island.

STYLING ARTISANAL PIECES FOR SUMMER

Spread the love

Designers search for inspiration around the world: some tap into their cultural heritage, others find new ideas travelling and discovering countries. Historically every nation has its traditions and specific arts and crafts unique to the area, that have been practised by generations. With a modern interpretation from the fashion designers, the classic artisanal techniques find new life in contemporary fashion.

Embroidery is one of the more common garment decoration techniques used in various countries. It's the motifs that distinguish countries from one another. This season's popular floral trend is expressed in Uzbek style embroidery of the skirt. The flute silhouette is extra feminine and will go perfectly with another summer craze - ruffles.

Eastern European influence on the fashion world is gaining strength: from the creative directors and designers of the leading fashion brands coming out of Soviet countries to Slavic culture providing endless source of inspiration for the designers around the world. Folkloric tunics, blouses and dresses with cross stitch and border embroideries have been a phenomenon of 2015. Today a Ukrainian vyshyvanka is a summer wardrobe staple.
